

Connect Now Congress

The Connect Now Congress was formed to perform one task: to write the Connect Now Statement in three, three-hour sessions in March 2009.

Most of the 46 Connect Now “congressional representatives” had participated in neighborhood, teacher, administrator, or student conversations, and volunteered to represent their conversations.

The Congress included community leaders, retirees, students, teachers, principals, parents and others from all over the county. These individuals representing a diversity of perspectives were all anxious to work together to craft from what was said during the 54 earlier conversations a Statement for the community and schools to move forward together.
